Huron Club Invaded Harlem 5,-000 Strong, to Testify the Loyalty of First District for the Magistrate.

Twas & Finny night in Harlem and the only finny ones who didn't go up from the First District to attend the Huron Club's "annual" were the finny tribe that swims around the tanks at the Aquarium. For it was "Battery Dan" Finn's gala night, and the lower end of Manhattan Island had to be natied down after the inhabitants went uptown to spend the evening at Manhattan Casino, One Hundred and Difty-fifth street and Eighth avenue It takes pretty strong inducements to get First Assembly District men to go up to Harlem, even for one evening, but they went last night, 5,000 strong, to pay honor to His Honor, Magistrate Daniel E. Finn.

Why did they go up to Harlem? Well, Rollo, when 5,000 Batteryltes do congregate they need a little elbow room, and there wasn't a hall below Fourteenth street that would hold them, so they wenpt higher up.

The whole Battery saluted, all the big guns and little guns, when "liantery Dan" entered the Casino, a little late, and made his way to the box where Mrs. Finn and the whole Finn family awaited him. There were Daniel, Junior; Philip, Joseph and John, Nellie and Florence, Daniel III., and Florence Dugan and Jay Finn.

Big Tim Sullivan and Florrie Sullivan went up in an automobile and were given an ovation by the Battery clan, with Second District enthusiasts, paraded up the length of the island burning fireworks and making merry while on their way to pay their respects to their Battery neighbors.

Among those there were: Alderman Andy Doyle, of the First; Assemblymen Thomas B. Cunningham, Alfred J. Smith and Charley Anderson, and Senators Dan Riordan and J. C. Fitzgerald, Alderman Frank Dowling and Leader Frank Goodwin, of the cheaper than the profane picture cards which gave the desperate author his inspiration. Its wit is confined to ringing changes on the name until you feel like swearing yourself. With flendish crueity to animals, a poor, helpless builded is dragged into the cast. Among other members Stella Mayhew gave a dainty imitation of a bover at Hammerstein's, Flossie Crane, the Coney cantatrice, shook the neighboring buildings. Flossie is a little thing of two hundred odd, with a voice that sounds like a male chorus. They've spoiled her "natural charm" by taking her out of her Coney togs and putting her into a white starched dress. She may not be soothing, but she is interesting.

BALLAD OF THE CURB.

BY WALTER A. SINCLAIR.

Roped in on Broad, A broker jawed And issued forth a wail.

For he was blue At McAdoo,

And thuswise ran his tale: "Excuse my loud and frantic screams; It's enough to make one cuss. We dealt in coppers. Now it seems

The coppers deal in us. Whene er I think I'll nab a deal Away goes all my hopes. I get a push and gently keel

Over the bound'ry ropes. "That's why my collar's getting ho.

What chance has a curb broker got?

"Roped in just like a six-round fight We make our little dickers. On ozone blackboards flurries write;

Our watch fobs hold our tickers. And just as we get all worked up Over some market drop.

To us it is a bitter cup To be chased by a cop.

"But here's my scheme-this is a fact: I'm out to learn a tight-rope act."
Thus filled with hope Inside the rope The broker then did sing: 'Here is the dope.

Groans and the smell of gas roused Henry Trotskey, of No. 250 Madison street, to-day in time to save the life of his sister Sarah, whom he found lying on the floor of the bathroom meanly asphyxiated. The police say that the case is one of attempted sui-cide, but the family of the girl, who is now in Gouverneur Hospital, insist that it was accidental.

According to the story told by the brother, Sarah rose from her sleep, dazed and semi-conscious, during the night and went to the bathroom, where she had traced gas escaping. This, they said, was the result of the lighted
